

LAIRSEEKER

Lair Seeker is a refugee and Lair Seeker isn't her real name. She lost that when as the last of her species she chose to dishonor her name rather than let thousands of human beings starve to death. The land was put to cereal to feed the children borne by people who would not understand that there was a finite carrying capacity to the land they lived on.

Because the guardians of Dartmoor did not see her sacrifice as dishonorable they offered her sanctuary on Dartmoor until such time as human beings could and would recognize what they had done and restore that part of the world to the wilderness it had being intended to remain. This they know will not happen for generations yet, because it takes a long time for new ideas to take root in a human society.

The creators of the guardians foresaw the possibility of honorable dishonor and also for the possibility that human kind would in time attempt to restore those lands they had ruined and allowed for these possibilities. Lair Seeker species will continue to survive as one member of the species alive at a time, continuing from mother to daughter. Her kind will not be able to increase until such time as her ancestral lands are returned to the wilderness and there is again a need for more of her kind to watch over those lands.

Until that time Lair Seeker will remain a guest of the Guardians of Dartmoor and will continue to help her hosts in their task
