

THE DAYS WORK DONE

Lairseeker and the Guardian have been lucky enough to come across a minstrel after the days work and of course no Guardian in her right mind would pass up the chance to spend a little time listening to a Minstrel Master making music while the day passes into night.

Most if not all minstrels are those people who are wanderers from birth and who simply become unhappy if forced to stay in one place for too long. They earn their living making music and telling stories and are always welcome anywhere on Dartmoor.

The really good ones are given the title of Minstrel Master and are skilled at evoking happy memories of the past and in generating hope for the future. In Lairseekers shadow world, they are highly valued and respected for the therapeutic properties of their art.
